JODI NISHIOKA WELLNESS POLICIES & SABBATICAL WORKSHOP

Jodi Nishioka has worked for over 20 years on behalf of low-income communities, particularly women, children, and immigrant and refugee communities. She started her career as an attorney advocating for immigrant domestic violence survivors and single mothers fighting for child support in legal aid organizations in Boston and Honolulu. Jodi continued her work on behalf of women and children within state and city governments in Hawaii and Seattle, and later with grassroots nonprofit organizations. Currently, Jodi is the Co-Executive Director of the BIPOC ED Coalition.

ABOUT THE TRAININGS

WELLNESS POLICIES FOR ORGANIZATIONS

Join us to explore cultivating creativity and energy in leadership roles to benefit our community, organization, and ourselves. Discover strategies to prevent burnout and empower emerging leaders without sacrificing passion and productivity. We'll delve into living our values by prioritizing team and personal wellbeing, examining productivity practices, and fostering sustainable leadership. When we succeed at making nonprofit leadership roles sustainable, we change the culture of our sector from being extractive and disempowering to being nourishing and empowering.

DEVELOPING A SABBATICAL PROGRAM

In this workshop we will go deep into the wellness policy of providing sabbaticals for nonprofit leaders. We will explore the “Why” of the power of sabbaticals, and the “How” an organization can create a sabbatical policy and program. We will introduce the Sabbatical Toolkit, which includes templates and materials on the nuts and bolts of creating a sabbatical policy, and outlines all of the considerations and implications of having a sabbatical program in your organization.
